Photochromic dyes: From molecule to device

Presented by Javier Read de Alaniz

University of California Santa Barbara

Photons have multiple enabling advantages to control stimuli-responsive materials. In this seminar, I will discuss our groups effort to design and develop a new class of negative photochromic molecules, their incorporation into materials and subsequent effort to unlock their potential to convert light directly into mechanical work.